OH, BY GOSH, BY GOLLY

... it's time for mistletoe and holly!

Mistletoe has long been used to decorate the insides of homes during the holiday season. The tradition of decorating with mistletoe dates back for centuries when it was thought that it possessed mystical powers and had the ability to bring good fortune. Mistletoe later became synonymous with friendship and love, and it is here that the custom of kissing under the mistletoe was derived. Once hung, a single white berry would be picked from the green and white ball for each kiss it inspired. When the pearly-white berries had all been picked, it was time for the kissing to stop. If you try this tradition at home this year, please do not eat the berries from the mistletoe plant. They contain toxins that could be harmful to people.

sharing our Blessings

As we give thanks this holiday season, it is important that we also remember our neighbors in need. Consider giving back this Thanksgiving. If you need help finding a charity, there are numerous websites that can help you find a charity based on cause, location and more.

It is not happy people who are thankful, it is thankful people who are happy.

The Night Before Christmas

One of my most favorite holiday memories occurred annually on the night before Christmas. When we were children, the sound of jingling bells outside the kitchen window on Christmas Eve would signify that Santa's elves had just dropped off a special gift for us. We'd run outside onto the front porch to find neatly wrapped packages filled with new cozy Christmas pajamas. We'd grab them and fly up the stairs to brush our teeth and get changed into our new sleepwear with great anticipation of the evening's festivities.

I remember humming along to the familiar, cheerful Christmas music coming from the family room downstairs. "It's time to read The Night Before Christmas," my father would pronounce. He would get out his reading glasses, and we'd all squeeze snugly into his favorite chair before he'd begin. "'Twas the night before Christmas and all through the house not a creature was stirring, not even a mouse." Silence. Just then, mom would sneak up and scare us by tickling our toes as if a mouse had just run between them. We'd jump, laugh and giggle as my father would continue reading his favorite Christmas poem seemingly unphased by all our hijinks. Over the years, we would find ourselves reading along with him. And at the close of the book, we knew it was time for bed and that Santa Claus would be coming soon.

According to legend, Clement Clarke Moore wrote his immortal poem, A Visit from St. Nicholas, also known as The Night Before Christmas, for his family on Christmas Eve 1822. He never intended that it be published, but a family friend learned of the poem sometime later and submitted it to the editor of the Troy (New York) Sentinel. It made its first appearance in print on December 23, 1823. Soon, the poem began to be reprinted in other newspapers, almanacs and magazines. 180 years later it is the most-published, most-read, most-memorized and most-collected book in all of Christmas literature.

You Better WATCH OUT

Krampus was created as a counterpart to kindly St. Nicholas, who rewarded children with sweets. Krampus, in contrast, would swat “wicked” children and take them away to his lair.

Krampus

The German Christmas Devil

Christmas has long been a celebration of joy, as Santa Claus rewards all of the good girls and boys with presents and holiday cheer. Children who have not been so nice are said to receive a lump of coal in their stockings, instead of a gift. However, many years ago, children received a visit from the “Christmas Devil,” a consequence much more frightening than coal.

The legend of the Krampus dates back centuries, originating as a German Christmas tradition during the 12th century. Beginning in early December, the children of Germany would begin to hear whispers of a dark haired creature bearing horns and fangs, carrying a bundle of birch sticks used to swat naughty children. According to traditional narratives of Alpine folklore, the Krampus would enter the towns, lashing his chains and bells, to capture the bad children in a basket and bring them down to the underworld. The Krampusnacht (Krampus Night) would occur the evening before December 6th (St. Nicholas Day), when the nice German children were rewarded with presents in their boots.

In the 21st century, many Alpine countries continue to celebrate the Krampusnacht with parades, where the townsmen dress like devils and run through the streets chasing after children and naughty parents alike. More recently, the legend of Krampus has gained popularity in America, with Krampus festivals held across the country in Los Angeles, Philadelphia, and New York City. So this holiday season, when someone greets you with “Merry Christmas,” feel free to respond with “Merry Christmas to you. . . And may Krampus not take your child away in a basket!”

“Be sure that kindness is your goal

Naturally Naughty ~ Christmas Coal

No one is quite sure why Santa Claus gives coal in place of gifts to naughty children at Christmas. The idea of giving a reminder to misbehaving children is common around the world though. Even if we don't know exactly why Santa Claus gives coal, it still serves as the perfect reminder that "he knows when you've been bad or good, so be good for goodness sake!"

“White Christmas” is widely regarded as the most popular Christmas song of all time.

Written by Irving Berlin on a warm, sunny day in California back in 1940, it was reported that he called out to his secretary, “Grab your pen and take down this song. I just wrote the best song I’ve ever written – heck, I just wrote the best song that anybody’s ever written.”

The song was recorded by Bing Crosby for Decca records in May of 1942 as part of the soundtrack for the upcoming Christmas movie, Holiday House. The final version of the song, which we still enjoy today, was recorded in just 18 minutes. Over 100 million copies of the recording have been sold since. Our Winter White Caroling Family and Santa Claus commemorate the 75th anniversary of this most classic Christmas Carol.

Christmas . . .

Stars and Angels gave the sign.

On a midwinter's night many years ago, a group of poor shepherds sat under the stars tending to their sleeping flocks of sheep. Suddenly from above, a great light shone out, and an angel came down from on high.

The shepherds were afraid – what business would an angel of God have with simple men such as them? But the angel reassured them, telling them not to be afraid, for he brought great and joyous tidings: that very night, a Savior had been born in the town of Bethlehem not far from where the shepherds sat. Leaving a few behind to watch the sheep, the rest of the shepherds went in search of the newborn child as a choir of angels sang out around them.

As the messengers of God, chief among them Gabriel, the angels brought news of the birth of Jesus to the people, just as they had foretold his birth to Mary and her husband-to-be, Joseph, many months before. Ever since, the figure of the angel has been an integral part of the Christmas story and has appeared in nativity scenes and plays around the world.

PARTY TIPS

There is no better way to spread holiday cheer than to invite all of your closest friends and family members over for a festive party. We recommend an Ugly Christmas Sweater party as a great theme to this year's celebration.

The premise is simple. Have each of your guests seek out their funniest, most colorful, outdated, holiday sweater to wear to the party. Here are a few suggestions to make your party even more fun.

Nothing is better than an ugly Christmas sweater!

- * Have funny contests that your guests can vote on such as:
 - Guest with the Ugliest Sweater
 - Best Accessories added to the Ugly Sweater
 - Most Embarrassing Ugly Sweater

Be sure to hand out awards!

- * Preparing themed food for the party is always fun. We recommend decorating gingerbread men wearing Ugly Christmas Sweaters. If time is limited, have a station where guests can decorate their own gingerbread men. Have plenty of colored icing and candied sprinkles to bring out their creative side.
- * Decorate your house by hanging up all of your extra ugly sweaters and embarrassing family pictures showing off some of the worst fashion faux pas from past decades.
- * Wrap the top of a table, with colorful wrapping paper and a big bow, to look like an oversized Christmas present. Encourage your guests to sign the paper with holiday greetings and well wishes.
- * Finally, end the night with a quick trip around the neighborhood to sing some Christmas carols and spread your holiday cheer. Imagine your neighbors' surprise when they find a full chorus of "Ugly Sweaters" at their front door!

Auntie Esther & Auntie Esther's New Boyfriend - $74 ea

One of our favorite things about the holiday season is that it creates the perfect opportunity to reach out to distant relatives for a visit and to spread some holiday cheer. It can be so much fun reconnecting and catching up with a lost relative while sharing in the spirit of the season. It seems that every family has at least one really eccentric aunt or uncle that really makes the party memorable. Our Auntie Esther is by far the life-of-the-party and comes once a year filled with hilarious stories of her travels and adventures. It seems she is always accompanied by a kind, happy-go-lucky companion. However, it is rarely the same companion twice!

SANTA CLAUS

FOR PRESIDENT

Santa Claus gets so many letters each year,
Most asking for presents, or spreading good cheer.
But over the years, Santa's received more and more
From kids in the U.S., and this is what for...

United States children keep asking St. Nick,
If he'd help out their nation, and help it out quick,
By running for President in 2016 —
He'd be the best Head of State we've ever seen!

After all, he is patient, loving, and kind,
His reputation for giving is tip-top of mind!
His North Pole toy factory is a well-oiled machine,
And for a new challenge, we hope Santa is keen.

Who better to have in that great, big White House
Than the Jolly Old Elf and his sweet, lovely spouse?
Santa's helpers could handle the toy making chores,
While at Christmas, he'd still make delivery tours.

Santa's platform would focus on what he holds dear:
"Peace on Earth, and Goodwill!" is the slogan we'd hear.
Just imagine a nation more for "giving" than "getting"...
Santa's term would be one we'd not soon be forgetting!

With a wink of his eye, and a big "Ho-ho-ho!"
Santa hugged Mrs. Claus and said, "Let's have a go!"
He tossed his hat high and started right in
To plan his campaign—he couldn't wait to begin.

At that moment young hearts in the U.S. of A.
Felt a rush and knew "something" had happened that day—
They felt hopeful and happy and exclaimed with delight,
"Santa's running for President! Our future looks bright!"

Up at the North Pole, Santa got things in order —
Since he planned to be busy for one year or more!
The elves heard him laugh as he donned his new coat,
"I'd be the next President, if children could vote!"

May the good Lord bless you, as your dear ones gather 'round.

Christmas in Ireland

Traditional Irish Christmas decorations are relatively simple, but very classic. It is thought that the first holly wreaths that were placed on the front door at Christmas originated in Ireland. Holly was one of the main plants that flourished at Christmas time and which gave the poor ample means with which to decorate their dwellings. It is also an Irish tradition to place a single lighted candle in the window of a house on Christmas Eve. The candle has a number of purposes but primarily it is a symbol of welcome to Mary and Joseph as they travel looking for shelter. In many households, the candle is lit by the youngest member of the household and can only be extinguished by a girl bearing the name 'Mary'. The candle also indicated a safe place for priests to perform mass, as during Penal Times this was not allowed.

May your laughter be hearty, and love and joy abound.

Wren Boys

One very old Irish tradition is the "Wren Boys Procession" that takes place on St. Stephen's Day, the day after Christmas. This goes back to ancient times when a real wren was killed and carried around in a holly bush. Some processions still take place today, but no wren is hunted or used. Young men and women dress up in homemade costumes and go from house to house carrying a long pole with a holly bush tied to its top and singing a rhyme about a wren. Sometimes they are accompanied by violins, accordions, harmonicas and horns.

Decoration Inspiration

Many families buy a new Christmas ornament each year as part of their family traditions. This family can't decide which delicate bauble they like best! Why not get one of each to make the tree really sparkle this year?

Gingerbread Cinnamon Rolls

(Makes 12 rolls)

Cinnamon Rolls Ingredients:

2 packages active dry yeast
1/2 cup evaporated milk
1/3 cup molasses
1/4 cup packed brown sugar
1 egg, lightly beaten
2 Tablespoons vegetable oil
1/2 teaspoon salt
4 cups all-purpose flour
2 Tablespoons butter, softened
Filling & Glaze (recipes below)

Directions:

In a bowl, combine yeast and 1/4 cup warm water (about 115 degrees F). Let stand 5 minutes. Stir in milk, molasses, brown sugar, the egg, oil, and salt. Stir in as much flour as you can. Turn dough out onto floured surface. Knead in enough remaining flour for moderately soft, smooth, elastic dough (5 minutes). Shape in ball. Place in greased bowl; turn once. Cover; let rise until double (1 hour). Punch down. Turn onto lightly floured surface. Cover; let rest 10 minutes.

Grease a 13x9x2-inch pan.

Roll dough to 12x8-inch rectangle. Spread butter on dough. Sprinkle filling to within 1 inch along one long side. Roll up, beginning at long side of filling. Pinch to seal. Cut 12 slices. Place in pan. Cover; let rise until nearly double (45 minutes). Heat oven to 350 degrees F. Bake for 22 to 25 minutes or until golden brown and set. Let stand 5 minutes; invert onto platter. Drizzle with glaze.

Filling Ingredients & Directions:

Combine in a bowl —
1/4 cup packed brown sugar
2 Tablespoons granulated sugar
1 teaspoon ground cinnamon
1/2 teaspoon ground ginger

Glaze Ingredients & Directions:

1 1/2 cups powdered sugar
1/2 teaspoon cinnamon
1/2 teaspoon vanilla
4 teaspoons milk

In a small bowl, combine powdered sugar, cinnamon, and vanilla. Stir in enough of the milk to make a glaze of drizzling consistency.

A COOKIE-BAKING FAMILY

My mom has four sisters who all love to bake. Each year, one of the sisters hosts the Annual "cookie bake and exchange" at her house. This is the biggest baking event of the year, and a great excuse for all of the aunts, and us kids to spend time together. So far, there are ten cousins ranging in age from 20 to 4 with two more on the way, so you can only imagine how full the kitchen gets. My grandma usually shows up wearing her handmade Christmas sweater adorned with blinking festive pins passed down from her mother and previous generations of cookie bakers.

Gumdrop Gables Resin Gingerbread House (9.5"Wx15.5"Hx13"D) - $120 ea

Prior to the event, we are each assigned a favorite old family recipe, or two, to bring ingredients and prepare. We make our dough and stage our preparations in advance, but we all bake together on site. And what a sight it is, with Christmas music blasting, all the sisters scrambling for space, the children watching and waiting armed with rolling pins and old-fashioned cookie cutters – standing ready to create. Typically, the youngest ones end up eating more raw cookie dough than ever gets put in the oven.

The smell of Christmas wafting through the air starts as the trays go in the oven and as grandma heats up the heirloom pizzelle iron. Soon a delectable variety of freshly baked Christmas treats start to appear: coconut macaroons in memory of our Nan who made them each year to perfection, twisted candy cane sugar cookies (which are my brother and my favorite), gingerbread and, of course, the traditional peanut butter tandy cakes and chocolate chip cookies. And every year, the kids line up to use grandma's antique sugar cookie press, which has been passed down from baker to baker. We take turns pressing out colorful stars, Christmas trees, wreaths, gingerbread men and the like.

Nan's Perfect Coconut Macaroons

1 Tablespoon flour
1/2 cup sugar
1/4 teaspoon salt
2 egg whites
2 cups of shredded coconut
1/2 teaspoon vanilla extract
1/4 teaspoon almond extract
Candied cherry topping optional

Grease and flour cookie sheet.

Mix first 3 ingredients in bowl and set aside.

In separate bowl, whip egg whites until stiff (not dry) then add vanilla and almond extract.

Fold in dry ingredients, then the coconut.

Drop by rounded teaspoon on greased cookie sheet (important to grease or it will stick).

Bake at 325 degrees for 15 minutes or until the coconut is lightly toasted.

A balanced diet is a Christmas cookie in each hand

Soon, the eggnog is poured and toasts are made. The children are frantically cookie decorating with icing and sugar crystal embellishments. The celebration spans throughout the day and into the evening, as we nibble on snacks, appetizers and cookies, of course!

With all of the baking completed and cookies decorated, we conclude by filling dozens of cookie tins with the sweet assortment of shapes, colors, textures and flavors. The cookie tins are the perfect homemade gifts to share with all of our closest friends and family. It is so fun to bake together and to share the homemade cookies with others. After all, we can't possibly eat them. We're all on a diet.
